

What is sexual assault and sexual harassment?

Sexual violence is any incident of unwanted sexual contact. It includes rape, sexual assault, sexual abuse and sexual harassment.

If you have experienced any form of sexual violence, whatever the circumstances, whenever it happened, it was not your fault.

There is help and support available so you can make your own decision about what happens next.

Sexual violence may include, but is not limited to:

- rape
- sexual assault – this can include inappropriately touching someone without their consent, unwanted kissing, and/or making someone take part in a sexual activity with them without their consent
- childhood sexual abuse
- sexual harassment – any unwanted sexual behaviour that makes someone feel scared, upset, offended or humiliated
- revenge porn'
- 'flashing' or cyber-flashing

WHAT HAPPENS NEXT?

A meeting to discuss your individual situation and to get support. If it is necessary to gather further information before making a decision, you will be informed about the timescale of the subsequent actions.

Outcomes might involve:
• an informal resolution
• a referral for support
• talking to you about the option to make a formal complaint

During the meeting(s) you and your chosen contact person will discuss/decide the best approach to take.
