10 years track-record

I am an internationally renowned feminist psycho-social and socio-legal scholar with expertise in the areas of mental health, law, society, and criminology, centering on issues of gendered structural violence, violence against children in conflict zones, state violence, and victims of abuse of power. My academic profile is distinctly global. I have held Distinguished Visiting Fellowships at UCLA, Georgetown University, and Columbia University. I am now Chair of Global Law at Queen Mary University of London and Lawrence D. Biele Chair in Law at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, Israel. I have been recognized as a leader in the fields of youth and childhood studies, feminist criminology, gender based violence, state violence, and settler-colonialism. Most recently, I have undertaken a project, co-led with Professor Lila Abu-Lughod at Columbia University and Professor Rema Hammami at Birzeit University, that examines gender, securitization, humanitarianism, and state violence. In addition to traditional scholarly contributions, I have led three major research projects in collaboration with Jerusalem-based NGOs. This resulted in the production of four major monographs, presentations in global UN and university conferences, and articles in academic journals. Being a scholar-activist has pushed me to engage in teaching and publishing about the role of academics in promoting justice. This was the focus of a book I co-edited with two Israeli feminist scholars in 2019: Engaged Students in Conflict Zones: Community-Engaged Courses in Israel as a Vehicle for Change.

My book, Security Theology, Surveillance and the Politics of Fear (2015), theorized the political economy of fear and its theologies. Along with my colleague from the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, Professor Nadim Rouhana, I led a major project on the fusion of religious claims and nationalism, and published an edited volume with 13 comparative chapters, analyzing India, Sri Lanka, Iran, Saudi Arabia, the former Yugoslavia, Northern Ireland, Israel, and Palestine. My last authored book examined childhood, trauma, and state violence, resulting in the publication of my book, Incarcerated Childhood and the Politics of Unchilding (2019). The book expands analytical borders to insist that childhood is not only a psychological, social or human rights issue, but also political capital in the hands of the state and that it must be studied with an eye towards interdisciplinarity. My scholarship and leadership in the fields of criminology, feminist studies, liberatory mental health, and law and society have earned me top international awards.
